Students say her workshops and classes are constructed to improve your work. She demonstrates a technique and then has you try it. Valerie offers intriguing quips that help students remember watercolor procedures. She moves around the room and constructively goes over details each student needs to improve their painting. If your painting looks flat, she shows you how to give it depth. If you find your painting lacks color, she shows you how to mix the right amount of paint and water to give it the vivid color it needs. The way she teaches builds confidence with beginners and covers intense details that experienced users appreciate and never realized. We often cannot see what bothers us about our painting, Valerie explains what is needed to get you past the frustration... and excited to finish your work!
